

mirror arrangement being sequentially illuminated with at least three colors in a beam path through a variable color filter onto said object surface for identification of at least three depth planes of said object in a single image; registering said image of said object with a color camera from a direction different from said beam path; and calculating a high precision topography of said object surface from said registration in a control and evaluation unit.

---